FALLS IN FAINT AND IS DROWNED.

Mrs. Ida O. Langley of Near New Salem Dies Under Peculiar Circumstances.

SUBJECT TO EPILEPTIC FITS

Had Been in Better Health During Last Three Months But Is Stricken at Spring House This Morning. Falls in Drain.

UNIONTOWN, June 19.—Mrs. Ida O. Langley, wife of Alexander Langley of near New Salem, died this morning under peculiar circumstances. While doing her morning chores about the spring house, Mrs. Langley was seized by an epileptic fit. She fell, face downward, in the stream that runs away from the spring, and when found by the family a short time later, was dead.

Mrs. Langley had been enjoying the best of health the past three months, after a long seige of epileptic spells. She believed she had been cured of them. She was 42 years old and leaves her husband and five children.

Dr. J. D. Cox was summoned but life was extinct long before he arrived. Mrs. Langley was a daughter of William Frost, who runs a store in the Park addition.

TOO SLOW AT COUNTY HOME, HATTIE ESCAPES

Girl of the Jail Scandal Raises Window and Leaves During the Night Time.

UNIONTOWN, June 19.—Hattie Gordon has escaped. The heroine of the jail scandal was sent to the County House a few days ago but decided life there was too much on the simple order of things.

During the night Hattie raised a window and got out by that means. They would like to hear from her up that way and officers are on the trail.

The Gordon girls were sent to Morganza as a result of the jail investigation but at the reformatory Hattie was sent back because of approaching motherhood.

Hattie was denied a home by her father. "The law took her away from me," said old man Gordon, "so let the law take care of her." As Hattie didn't like the law's way of taking care of her she hung the "23" sign over her bed and like the Arab, folded her tent in the night and silently stole away.

BOY'S BODY STILL IN YOUGH RIVER.

Efforts to Locate Hurst McCormick's Body Proves Futile and Search Goes On.

As yet the efforts to locate the body of little Hurst McCormick, who was drowned in the old swimming hole near the Sodom shops, yesterday, have proved futile. Scores of times have experts swimmers dived to the bottom of the hole and come up with no tidings. Owing to the muddy water it is impossible to see below the surface but the divers believe the body has drifted down the stream.

Several boats and more grappling hooks are dragging the river below the scene of the tragedy but to no avail as yet.

WILL RAISE $1,000 WITHIN FEW DAYS

Largely Attended Meeting of the Fourth of July Celebration Committee Held Today.

The daily committee meeting of the Fourth of July celebration was largely attended this morning but little new developed. The Finance Committee is still on the move and reporting favorably, although it has been difficult to secure some subscriptions.

According to the outlook this morning it will be possible to raise the $1,000 needed for the affair within the next few days, if the solicitors stay on the job regularly.

Until the funds are in the hands of the treasurer it will be impossible to determine exactly the outlay to be made. The Finance Committee is gauging all its expenses by the actual cash in hand, some of the members having had former experiences with subscriptions.

POLICE LOOKING FOR LEON LING.

They Believe Converted Chinaman Killed Miss Elsie Sigel.

DAMAGING LETTERS UNEARTHED

Letters Written By Girl Seem to Establish Motive For the Killing and Indicate She Was Deeply Interested in the Christianized Celestial.

United Press Telegram.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Among hundreds of love letters in the room where the body of Elsie Sigel, settlement worker and granddaughter of the late General Franz Sigel, was found, the police today located letters written by the girl which they claim establish the motive for the girl's killing. Her body was found jammed in a steamer trunk and life had apparently been extinct for days.

The letters extend over a period of two years and the last was written from the home of her parents. It reads:

"You seem to be growing cold to me. Just think of the sacrifice I have made for you; my family, my friends. For God's sake don't forsake me now."

Leaving behind these letters has convinced the police that Leon Ling left the place in great haste. A general alarm has been sent out for him, as well as Ching Sin, another Christianized Chinaman, who, with Ling, has been missing from the house since Sunday.

From the evidence in the hands of the police it is believed Miss Sigel was greatly interested in Leon Ling and had been since shortly after her entrance into settlement work among the Chinese some three years ago.

Ling was a frequent visitor at the Sigel home, apparently with the sanction of Miss Sigel's parents.

From Mrs. Margaret Todd, the missionary who first introduced Miss Sigel into the work of converting the residents of Chinatown to Christianity, the police learned today that while the young woman taught Ling the creed of Christ, he, at the same time, learned to love her. From Mrs. Todd's statement and letters found in the room where the girl had been strangled, it has been learned that Ling was not the only admirer Elsie Sigel had. A letter to Ling threatened his death if he did not cease his attentions to the comely young missionary.

Mrs. Todd said Ling was very jealous of Miss Sigel and had forbidden her from accepting the attentions of anyone else.

BIG MORTGAGE FILED IN SOMERSET

Records a Deed of Trust for $7,500,000 Given by the Merchants Coal Company.

SOMERSET, June 19.—A mortgage or deed of trust for $7,500,000, probably the largest mortgage ever placed on record in Somerset county, has been entered in the office of Recorder Norman E. Berkey. The holdings of this corporation are enormous and are estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000 acres. The mortgage also covers all machinery and so forth.

It is set forth in the mortgage that the company was in need of large sums of money for acquiring new coal property and for improving their mines. There will be a bond issue of 7,500 five per cent bonds of a par value of $1,000 each.

BUSY WEEK OF COURT IS ENDED.

Remarkable Time Made in the Trial of Long List of Cases.

HEARS MORE TESTIMONY

In An Appeal For a New Trial of Kuhns and Russell—Many Cases of Minor Importance Are Disposed of at Last Session.

UNIONTOWN, June 18.—The jury was discharged yesterday for the week all the jury trials having been disposed of. It is believed that next week's session will be short, as there are few remaining cases to be heard. Most remarkable good time has been made in disposing of the list this week.

Testimony was heard yesterday afternoon by Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen in the application for a new trial in the cases of James Kuhn and Thomas Russell, the latter known as "Steeple Jack," convicted of robbery. The case presents some unusual features and has created considerable interest. Judge Van Swearingen after hearing some contemplated testimony relative to the case in which it was testified that Kuhns was the wrong man taken into custody stated that he would decide the case in a few days, and fixed his bond at $1,000. Russell's bonds were also fixed at that, and he said that he could not furnish it but preferred being sentenced rather than lie in jail three months before a re-trial of the case. The court stated that if a new trial was granted it would be taken up next week.

Attending church in Fairchance seems to be attended with perilous features, according to the developments in the case of the Commonwealth against Clarence Swaney. Albert E. Maust declared that while he was returning from church in that borough recently with two young women, Swaney slipped up behind him and struck him a vicious blow back of the ear with a pair of metal knucklers. Swaney yesterday entered a plea of guilty to a charge of assault and battery preferred by Maust.

Walter Skelky, of Dawson, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery upon Helen Boslett, the 12-year-old daughter of W. J. Boslett of Dawson. Skelkey was charged with a more serious offense, but when the circumstances were related to the court, he was permitted to plead guilty to the charge of simple assault and battery.

Charles Durbin and Grover Kelley pleaded guilty to a charge of affray for fighting in front of the postoffice at South Connellsville. Durbin pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying concealed weapons at Moyer, the charge being made by Albert Burkett.

George Ed Smith pleaded guilty to a charge of aggravated assault and battery preferred by County Detective Frank McLaughlin. Smith shot John Irwin in the leg at Gates.

F. B. DeRoche, an insurance solicitor, pleaded no defense to a charge of larceny by clerk which contained four counts. DeRoche was employed by the Continental Casualty Company of Hammond, Ind. He made a large number of collections for the company, aggregating $311.09 and never turned in the money. The charge against him was made by Hurley C. Platz.

David Gilmore, charged with the larceny of some fish and other edibles from Denmore Provance of Dunbar township, was acquitted, the costs being placed on the prosecutor.

Omer Stillions of Hopwood, had a misunderstanding with his wife, Nellie. They were in court before Judge R. E. Umbel yesterday, Stillions being charged with desertion and non-support. The couple agreed to go back to Hopwood and live happily together and the case was dismissed.

J. A. Foltz of Baisinger was charged with assault and battery by Mary E. Foltz. He was acquitted and the prosecutrix directed to pay the costs.

GET YOUGH HOUSE BURGLAR PERHAPS.

Man of Many Aliases Is Under Arrest, Charged With the Crime.

HAS BEEN IN TROUBLE BEFORE

Benny Jame Is the Name He Goes Under Now and He Has Been Committed to Jail Pending a Hearing Before Squire Buttermore.

The police have arrested Benny Jame, alias R. C. Harris, alias Jesse White, as a suspect in connection with the robbery of the Yough House early last Saturday morning. The man was apprehended at the Armory dance last evening by Officer James Fransis, armed with a warrant procured from Justice of the Peace P. M. Buttermore.

Information against the man was made by County Detective Frank McLaughlin, who has been working on the case since it was first reported to him. In his investigations he was aided by Chief of Police Rottler. Squire Buttermore committed Jame to jail until he is given a hearing for which no date has been set.

The man is well known to the police. Several years ago he was arrested for forging a check on Pasquale Bufano, for which he served a term in the penitentiary. He has served as a special officer for the West Penn but was recently discontinued. During that time he was a deputy sheriff. The man is said to have impersonated an officer subsequent to his discharge.

Chief of Police Rottler took Jame to jail this morning. He will be brought back here for a hearing later.

CHILLY MORNING FOR A JUNE DAY

Mercury Took a Drop, Reaching 42 in the Early Hours of the Morning.

Was it cold this morning? Just a little. When the West Penn motormen and conductors were turning out in the gray hours of dawn they took a peek at the thermometer and shivered when they saw 42 recorded. By 8 o'clock, after the sun had been out for a couple of hours, the mercury crawled up to 52. Yesterday the two records at the West Penn were 63 in the morning and 69 in the afternoon.

Reports from the mountains are to the effect that a slight frost fell during the night but not enough to hurt vegetation. The farmers are afraid, however, that their crops will be affected if the cool snap continues.

William Kelley has been very ill for five or six weeks with typhoid fever. His condition is very bad at this time.

Barnhart who took such a great interest in the school endeavored through all these years to reach the 100 mark. For a long time it stood at 90 but this was the high water mark. In the spring of this year the officers noted the increase in numbers and on last Sunday it was a pleasing sight to count 10. members of the class together. FIGHT FOR PEOPLE.

Support Taft's Tax Plan, Urges Ex-Senator Chandler.

Concord, N. H., June 19.—William E. Chandler, former United States senator and ex-secretary of the navy, issued a signed public statement last night in which he urges all progressive Republicans to support President Taft in his attitude on the income tax. The statement follows:

"All progressive and radical Republicans should promptly sustain President Taft in the two great fights he has bravely inaugurated. The question of a coming graduated income tax pending before the state legislatures all over the Union and of an immediate national tax on all corporation incomes is the biggest fight for the people that any president has made.

"The malefactors of great wealth will renounce and denounce the president when they have thought they could control. The sugar trust, the Standard Oil company and the steel company will turn their batteries against the president's plans. The progressives should see their opportunity and rush as one man to the president's report as the plutocrats desert him.

"In New Hampshire every Republican, regular or progressive, and all the Democrats should make an outcry in behalf of the corporation income tax now, and an amendment of the constitution, and a permanent and universal income tax later. This is the way in which we must provide for our huge army and navy expenditures which seems impossible to lessen.

"William E. Chandler."

EDGES CLOSER TO FARNUM.

Actor's Name Is Mentioned Often in Divorce Suit.

SERVANTS TELL MORE TALES

Gould Separation Hearing Goes Merrily Along, Enlivened by Spicy Testimony of Mrs. Gould's Former Employes and Hotel Clerks.

New York, June 19.—The flow of testimony adduced by the defense in the suit for separation brought by Katherine Clemmons Gould against her husband, Howard Gould, kept edging more and more toward Dustin Farnum, the actor, while broad shoulders and mop of curly hair have become a familiar figure in the case. There was also iteration by servants and personal attendants that Mrs. Gould was repeatedly seen under the influence of liquor by them and that when she had been drinking, as they alleged on the stand, she changed from a charming, affable woman to a woman of whims and caprices, ill-tempered, not nice in her choice of language, overbearing and quarrelsome.

John H. Kimball, an oil and paint dealer, who said he had known Mr. Gould for eighteen years, testified that he went to a performance of "The Virginian" in August, 1906, with Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Sells and the Goulds at the Academy of Music in this city, and that Dustin Farnum, the star in the play, joined the party outside the playhouse, after the performance, and spoke to Mrs. Gould. She smiled, the witness testified, and said to the witness: "This is my new beau."

Chauffeur Gives Testimony.

John Flynn, who said he was employed by Mrs. Gould as a chauffeur and that he often drove her to meet Farnum after the play, testified that once when Mrs. Gould was waiting in the automobile for Farnum at the Hotel Somerset two men turned to the actor as he came out of the hotel door and asked him whose automobile was waiting.

"Oh," said Farnum, Flynn testified, "this is my new one."

Another time, Flynn swore, when he rapped on Mrs. Gould's chamber door at the St. Regis, she called out:

"All right, dearie," and then, when she saw who it was, excused herself with: "I thought it was Mr. Farnum."

Mary Elizabeth Harrison, a fresh-cheeked, good-looking girl, who said she was a floor clerk in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel in Philadelphia, prefaced her testimony with the explanation that it was her first appearance in court. She had been impelled by her conscience, she said, to tell what she saw at the hotel. Finally, she wrote a letter to Mr. Gould.

"I said in the letter," she testified, "'in obedience to the Golden Rule, I write to you to help you if you are in trouble,' or something like that."

Mrs. Gould occupied apartments on the floor where she was stationed in September, 1906, the witness went on, and about 7:30 o'clock she said she saw a man come out of Mrs. Gould's rooms and take the elevator. She noticed that he was the only passenger in the car and that the dial registered fourteenth floor when the car stopped. She described the man as tall, with dark, bushy hair and wearing a soft hat and a long coat.

Bellevue-Stratford Incident.

The defense contends that Dustin Farnum was staying on the fourteenth floor of the hotel at that time, as they attempted to show by the next witness, Florence Garner. She also was employed in September, 1906, as a floor clerk in the Bellevue, on the fourteenth floor she said, when Dustin Farnum was playing in "The Virginian" at Philadelphia. She testified that Farnum had a room on that floor at the same time Mrs. Gould had rooms on a lower floor. She remembered that one morning he came up in the elevator rather early, and appeared to her "less well-groomed" than usual.

"Did you take any means to find out if Mr. Farnum's room had been occupied that night?" asked Delancey Nicoll, Mr. Gould's lawyer.

"No, but the maid reported that it had not been," the witness answered.

On cross-examination she said she talked with Miss Harrison about the incident afterwards.

Can Buy as Many as He Likes.

New York, June 19.—If Dr. Ramon Bengoochea, the Guatemalan consul general in New York, chooses to buy the entire monthly issue of a magazine he may do so unhampered by international red tape. The consul general, according to general reports, has taken up all the June numbers of the Uncle Sam magazine and Judge Lacombe in the United States circuit court refuses to interfere with an injunction obtained on the consul general's behalf.

Dug Out Eyes of Victims.

Torreon, Mex., June 19.—Tiburcio Garcia, a mail carrier between this city and Topia a remote mining camp, and his brother, Juan, were murdered by robbers. The robbers, in the belief that dead men's eyes retain the photographic impression of the murderer, had dug out the eyes of their victims.

FOUND IN TRUNK.

New York Has Another Sensational Murder Mystery.

New York, June 19.—Elizabeth Sigel, daughter of Paul Sigel of this city, and granddaughter of the illustrious Franz Sigel, the German warrior who enlisted his services with the Union Army during the Civil war, is, according to all indications the victim of one of the most sordid murders in the history of New York. If she is not the victim the police are confronted with a remarkable series of coincident facts.

Taken from a trunk in a room of a Chinaman above a chop suey restaurant in the tenderloin, the body, in a state of decomposition which makes identification difficult, lies in the morgue, while detectives are collecting the threads of a tangled story involving the girl and her associations with Chinese.

Henry G. Barnell, who is interested in the Americanizing of Chinese, gave the police a valuable clue in that he described a Chinaman who formerly occupied the room where the body was found. While there is no direct evidence to connect this Chinaman with the murder, the fact that he was the last occupant of the room makes him a valuable witness at least.

The house in which the body was discovered is in the Tenderloin district. Sun Laung, the proprietor, brought about the revelation of the crime. He noted a peculiar odor and, fearing that some one had committed suicide, notified the police. They ascended to the top floor, entered a small room and pried open a small steamer trunk. There lay the body, cramped and partly decomposed, with a rope wound tightly about the throat and also tied about the knees and arms.

The body was covered with blood and the clothing was torn, indicating there was a struggle. The man who had occupied the room evidently had left hastily, for there had been no effort to remove anything. He was evidently converted to Christianity, for there were about the room Bibles and prayer books, containing names written in both English and in Chinese which gave the information that he was known in English as William H. Lion, and in Chinese as Leong Loo Lim.

Scrawled on a card in fairly good English was an unsigned note which read: "I hope you do not get mad at me, because all the trouble come from me. Hope some day the happiness come to us both."

DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE

Recent Advances Maintained and Outlook Very Optimistic.

New York, June 19.—Dun's Review of Trade says today:

"The advance recently made in industrial activity and business confidence is fairly maintained. From the leading cities come advices of wider wholesale and retail distribution, larger employment of labor, additional work for contractors and builders, increased demand for manufacturing materials, satisfactory advance fall sales.

"Broadening of demand from the railroads has become a feature in the markets for iron and steel, and this development strengthens the general feeling of optimism regarding the future outlook. Orders for equipment from the transporting companies already comprise a liberal tonnage and further substantial business will shortly be placed.

"Construction work is still undertaken with considerable vigor, the erection of new bridges and buildings calling for a good tonnage of material and extensions and improvements are constantly being made. Reports also indicate a slight hardening of quotations named by fabricators. Activity continues in the pig iron division at firmly held prices, sales reaching substantial dimensions."

GREATEST SONGFEST.

Six Thousand Voices to Be Heard in Chorus in New York.

New York, June 19.—For size and distinction the musical festival which will begin tonight in Madison Square Garden, to last four days, has probably never been rivaled in America. The men in charge of the festival declare that never before has there been assembled in this country so great a number of singers to interpret the works of the masters of the musical art.

Among the prominent features of the festival will be concerts rendered by a male chorus of 5,000 voices and an orchestra of 100 pieces. A special feature will be the contest open to the singing societies of the United States competing for the famous "kaiser prize," a statue donated to the United Singers of New York by Emperor William.

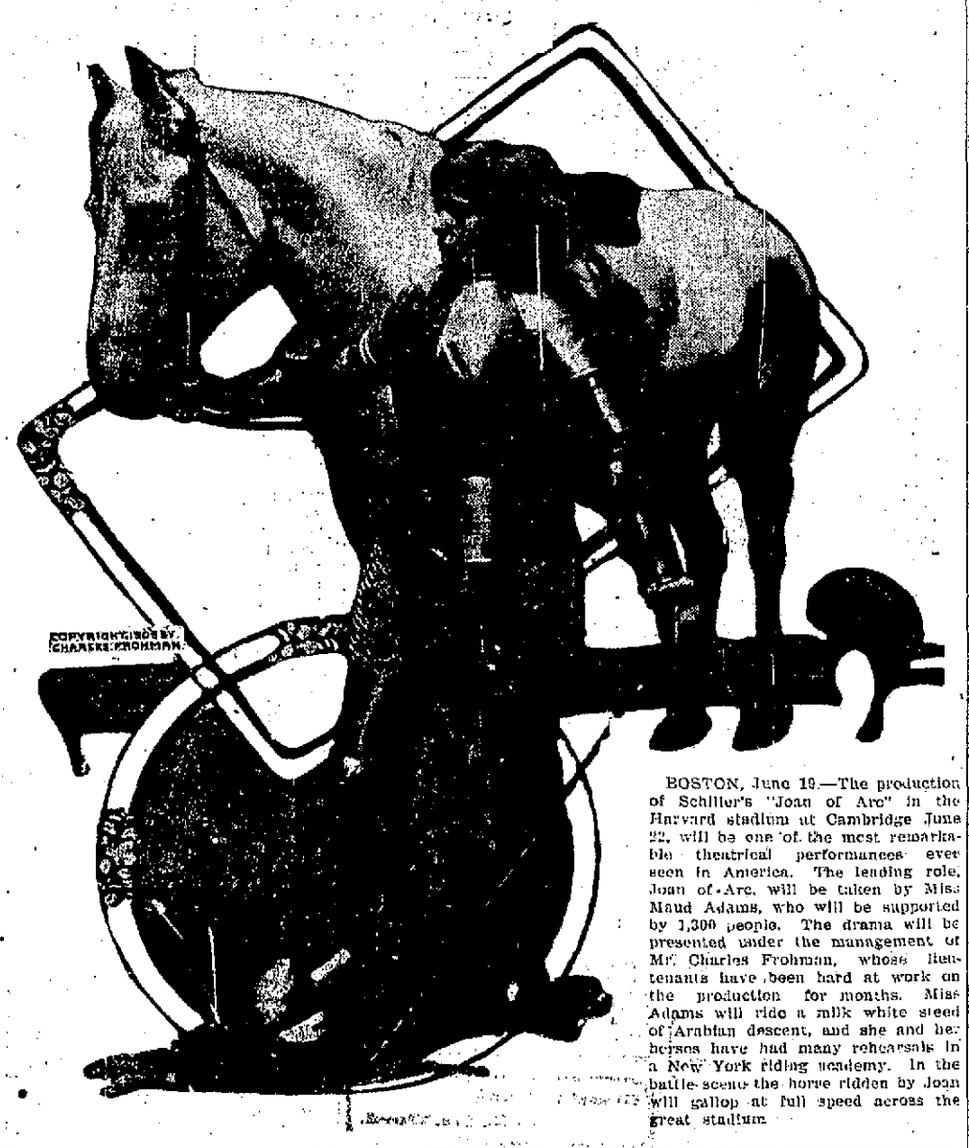
For the first time in the history of music festivals in America there will be competitive prize singing by American glee clubs for a prize donated by a well known American citizen, for which clubs in the east and middle west have been invited to compete.

President Taft and Governor Hughes, with many other persons of prominence, have promised to attend the festival. Two of the five judges of the principal events are Germans appointed by Emperor William.

Sausages and Beer Not For Baby.

Chicago, June 19.—"Mothers, if you want to keep down the city's infant mortality rate, beware of feeding your babies with sausage and beer during the first year of their existence," was one of the warnings given at the Illinois Congress of Mothers.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS AS JOAN OF ARC IN GREAT PAGEANT IN HARVARD'S STADIUM



BOSTON, June 19.—The production of Schiller's "Joan of Arc" in the Harvard stadium at Cambridge June 22, will be one of the most remarkable theatrical performances ever seen in America. The leading role, Joan of Arc, will be taken by Miss Maud Adams, who will be supported by 1,300 people. The drama will be presented under the management of Mr. Charles Frohman, whose lieutenants have been hard at work on the production for months. Miss Adams will ride a milk white steed of Arabian descent, and she and her horses have had many rehearsals in a New York riding academy. In the battle scene the horse ridden by Joan will gallop at full speed across the great stadium.

ALBERT FRANCIS GETTING BETTER.

If Scottdale Young Man Improves Over Today Chances Good.

HE HAD A DANGEROUS FALL

Was Painting on Porch Roof and Fell Backward Alighting on Pavement On His Head and Shoulders—Other News Notes of Mill Town.

SCOTTDALE, June 18.—If he gets through today all right with no complications developing the doctors think that Albert Francis, aged 21, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Francis, who fell from the porch roof of A. S. Walter's residence where he was painting yesterday, will get along promptly to recovery. He rested nicely last night and showed signs of improvement this morning.

Mr. Francis had been engaged with the painting crew of W. A. Gordon and this is the second fall that he has had. Last week he fell at W. F. Stauffer's house alighting on his feet and being jarred somewhat but was able to go to work again. Yesterday he was on the porch of the Walter's house and had finished trimming a window and stepped down the porch roof. He turned to speak to Walter Stoner and the turn caused him to fall backward from the porch roof. He alighted on his head and shoulders on the pavement and it was thought that he had been killed. He was taken to his home on Loucks avenue and the nature of his hurts were hard to determine at that time.

A 10-Barreled Gun.

The carpenters while remodeling the old Anawalt property, now owned by Grazier & Hurst, came across a peculiar piece of work yesterday which puzzled some of them until its ancient and honorable use was explained to them. It was a frame of 10 cylinders, each perhaps 10 inches in length and with a handle at one side. Someone suggested that it must have been an old fashioned gun, with 10 barrels. Other uses were suggested, but one fellow explained that the machine was an old fashioned candle mold. It was used in ancient days when 10 candles were made all at once, and to the younger generation that is lighted up with electricity, gas lights and cigarettes the candle mold was something strange.

The Mercury Slipped Down.

The mercury stepped on a banana peel and fell heavily yesterday evening and while it was down Jack Frost rushed in. He did some business but no June frost record was made. People gathered in blankets, and this morning some vests were dragged forth and put into commission. The afternoon yesterday was remarkably like a fall afternoon, in both the feeling and the appearance of the day.

Drum Corps Will Go.

At the meeting of the Scottdale Volunteer Fire Department it was decided that the Firemen's Drum Corps will accompany the firemen to the annual convention to be held in Beaver Falls in August. The drum corps has 20 members and will make a hit in the parade. A committee will appear before Town Council and request the usual donation for expenses. The matter of the request from the members of the Fire and Water Committee for keys to the hose houses was complied with and each member will get a key.

Teachers Were Examined.

At the examination for teachers' provisional certificates at Greensburg yesterday there were several aspirants from this place and nearby. They were Bertha Buttermore and Nellie M. Taylor of Ruffsdale, Adrienne Stauffer, Benson R. Smith and Olive A. Mellon of Scottdale.

Steiner Reunion at Oakford.

The reunion of the descendants of Joseph and Susanna Steiner, deceased, will be held at Oakford park, earlier this year than usual, being Saturday, June 26, unless otherwise announced. Justice John C. Steiner and family of here are among the descendents.

Elks Will Contest.

This afternoon at Ellsworth park diamond, the Scottdale team will make a valiant try to make the Elks team from Jeannette draw in their horns in the baseball field. The game has been promised all week to be an exciting one, and ought to draw a large crowd.

R. D. Wolff Lectured.

R. D. Wolff, of Greensburg, lectured in the United Brethren Church last evening for the benefit of the charity fund of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and while the audience was not a large one, it took well to his lecture on "Fads and Faddists." He will be certain of having a much larger audience the next time he comes to Scottdale.

Down to the Capital.

Guy Wentzler and James R. Dickerhoff have been down to Harrisburg this week attending the Republican State convention and seeing the sights of that city.

To Build Another Room.

The Scottdale Board of Education at a meeting to be held next Monday evening, at their offices in the Chestnut street building, will let the contract for the additional room that they are going to add to the frame building on Pittsburg street, which is known among the pupils as the "Log Cabin."

Fruit and Blossoms.

The venerable Patrick Condon, of Potomac street, Greensburg, has a botanical curiosity in his lot that is attracting considerable curiosity among neighbors and admirers of the unusual. It is a pear tree which bears a good sized crop of pears, about the size of walnuts, and which is also covered with a second crop of blossoms.

CUTICURA CURED CHIEF OF POLICE

Canadian Officer Poisoned by Weeds.—Eczema Developed and Legs Became Scaly—Ankles were Very Sore and Itchy—For Weeks He Could Not Wear Shoes.

FREED FROM ITCHING BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I have been successfully cured of dry eczema. I was inspecting the removal of noxious weeds, it being part of my duty, from the edge of a river and was constantly in the dust from the weeds. At night I shook out my trousers and cleaned my limbs, but felt a prickly sensation. I paid no attention to it for two years, but I noticed a scum on my legs like fish scales. I could scrape it off, and yet I did not attend to it until it came to be too itchy and sore and began getting two running sores. My ankles were all sore and scabby and I could not wear shoes. I had to use carpet and felt slippers for weeks. I was then on particular police duty and was compelled to be on duty. I got a cake of the Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment. In less than ten days I could put on my boots and in less than three weeks, though on duty all the time, I was free from the confounded itching. I tell you frankly that Cuticura saved me from what the doctors called a bad leg. Capt. George P. Bliss, Chief of Police, Morris, Manitoba, Mar. 20, 1907, and Sept. 24, 1908."

COAL LANDS ARE CLASSIFIED ANEW.

Valuations Raised on Public Coal Domain in the Western States.

MAXIMUM IS $300 PER ACRE

Anthracite and Coking Coals Figured at Two and Three Cents Per Ton. Government's Action Taken to Prevent Creation of Monopoly.

The recent broadening of the policy of the present administration with reference to the classification and valuation of the 80,000,000 acres of remaining public coal lands is the subject of a statement just given out by the United States Geological Survey. The act of the Sixtieth Congress known as the Mondell law of March 3, 1909, gives to the agricultural entryman, on land later classified as coal land, the privilege of electing to take the surface rights, the coal rights remaining in the Government for further and separate disposition. The General Land Office already reports that 90 per cent of the Colorado entrymen on lands believed to be underlain with coal will choose surface rights, thus reserving to the United States the coal rights. This is significant of the value of the new law. If the entryman chooses to contest, the issue then becomes one of the relative worth of the land for agriculture or for coal mining.

Previous to 1906 public coal lands were sold, regardless of value, for $10 or for $20 an acre, according to whether they were within or without the 15-mile railroad limit. In that year, by presidential order, over 66,000,000 acres of such lands were withdrawn pending classification by the Geological Survey and a plan of valuation was established under which $100 an acre was fixed as the maximum price. This of course, was a long step forward, and the valuations fixed for many lands were much higher than the minimum prices.

A large amount of work has since been done by the field geologists of the Survey, so that now the tonnage and quality in many areas in the western coal fields are definitely known and Secretary Ballinger has put into effect a plan of valuation based on tonnage estimates as well as on grade of coal. This plan is believed to be eminently fair to the public and offers every opportunity possible under the law for the fullest development of the coal lands and at the same time insures a more adequate return to the Government for its property.

The present plan of classification and valuation, as revised in April, differs from that formerly in force in several important particulars. Coal tonnage and quality are the basis of valuation; the maximum price is raised from $100 to $300 an acre, and in developed coal fields, where the extent and character of the deposits are well known, there is no limit to the values that may be fixed. The price of coal land is thus definitely determined, at a cost price, yet the amounts rarely equal a quarter of the royalties paid in the same districts among private interests.

The prices fixed under the scheme of valuation which the Geological Survey has been instructed to carry out are as follows:

	Cents Per ton.
Anthracite and coking bituminous coals	2 to 3
High-grade noncoking bituminous coals	1 to 2
High-grade subbituminous and and low-grade bituminous coals	½ to 1

For low-grade subbituminous coals and lignites the minimum price fixed by law is $10 and $20 an acre.

The tonnage is always liberally calculated in the interest of the purchaser, and actual recovery should invariably exceed the tonnage on which the valuation is based.

In the Book Cliffs coal field of Utah, where some coking bituminous coal is valued at the highest price of 3 cents a ton, many of the Government valuations are above the $300 an acre maximum, as against $75 an acre under the scheme of last year and $20 an acre under the plan followed prior to 1906.

The conservatism of even the present valuation figures of public coal lands may be shown by a comparison of the Government valuations with the leasing rates charged by the States and private owners. The present coal-land policy provides for the saving to the Government and the people of enormous sums of money and prevents the monopolization by private interests of the western coal fields. The most advanced, scientific and effective methods of classifying and valuing the nation's remaining coal lands, which still constitute about 80,000,000 acres, have been adopted, and, the intent of the policy developed by Secretary Garfield and now further advanced by Secretary Ballinger is to promote development and economical utilization and at the same time to obtain adequate returns from these valuable public lands.

Lorimer Is Now Senator.

Washington, June 19.—William Lorimer of Illinois took the oath of office and is now a United States senator. It is expected he will join the "progressive" senators.

FRAMER OF INCOME TAX BILL AND TWO SUPPORTERS OF MEASURE

Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, a strong factor in the progressive element in the senate, drafted and introduced the joint resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution permitting the imposition of a tax on incomes. This amendment will be the basis of action by the judiciary committee, of which Senator Nelson is a member. Senator Nelson has voted with Senators Cummins, Dolliver, Beveridge, La Follette and the other progressives on nearly all the tariff schedules, declaring that the pledges for tariff reduction must be carried out. He was unwilling, however, that the income tax measure should be a part of the tariff legislation. Senators Burkett of Nebraska and Bristow of Kansas also are active in the progressive wing of the senate.

COKE EXPERIMENTS WITH ILLINOIS COAL

Col. Rend Thinks That It May Furnish Soft Steam Coke and Furnace Fuel.

Experiments which are being made with Franklin, Ill., coal for coking purposes show, it is claimed, that this coal will make good soft coke which may be substituted for coal for steam generating. This would largely solve the smoke problem for Chicago and other cities adjacent to these coal fields.

Col. W. P. Rend, well known to the coal and coke operators of the central States, says this can be done. The Colonel is one of the biggest coal dealers of the West, having large yards in and about Chicago where much of his own product is retailed. Col. Rend has been experimenting with the coal.

"A partial solution for the smoke problem lies in the substitution for coal of coke made from Western coal," he said in discussing his experiments. "Several experiments have been made on the Illinois Central Railroad with this coke with somewhat satisfactory results. It is my intention to build several coke ovens in Franklin county in order to experiment further with the manufacture of coke.

"I am already satisfied from the experiments that much coal in southern Illinois can be converted into coke suitable for steam generation. It will be necessary to have a specially prepared coke for this purpose, one which is only partly burned. In my judgment a soft coke would be preferable for purposes of generating steam—one that is coked only about 24 hours or long enough to expel that part of the volatile matter containing the soot.

"Soft coke is easier fired and gives less labor to the fireman, but costs about 15 per cent. more than coal. However, it makes a steady, fierce heat, catching fire the moment that it is thrown on, and burning with a clear white flame. Years ago I manufactured a soft coke at my mines in Pennsylvania which was used with satisfactory results on the tug boats here in the Chicago river and in Cincinnati on the switching engines. I believe that this coke will prove as satisfactory. There is a big question as to whether or not coke could be entirely substituted for coal in the generation of steam and the experiments which I am about to conduct are for the purpose of ascertaining that.

"Aside from the interest in finding a fuel that would eliminate smoke is that of discovering a cheap fuel near at hand for use in blast furnaces. At present the two fields that supply coking coal are in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, but I believe we have in Illinois coal that will give us a satisfactory coke as cheaply as they have in Pittsburg."

It is reported that fairly satisfactory experiments have been made at Gary, and Joliet in the steel mills and blast furnaces with Illinois coke and raw coal also, and that further tests are to be made with the Franklin county product.

NEW PLANT OPTIONED.

Springhill Township Operation Will Include 500 Acres of Coal.

The recently organized Fayette-Connellsville Coke Company, of which Christian Echard of Uniontown is President, has secured a total of about 500 acres of coal lands in Springhill township, this county and has 40 ovens completed to the oven seats.

The company has been doing some extremely rapid work and laying the foundations for a considerable operation. It is stated that the plant has already been optioned to John W. Holleau, to go into the coke merger.

MANY MINE EXPERTS SEE THE EXPERIMENTS

Inspectors From All States Where Coal Mining Is Conducted Assemble at Pittsburg.

State mine inspectors from all parts of the country gathered at the Government testing station at the Pittsburg Arsenal Park ground on Saturday, where they watched with keen interest the experiments made by the government experts in testing different makes of safety lamps, these tests being the burning of the lamp in a great tube filled with mine gas; and other tests of mining conditions.

Among those present from this section were T. D. Williamson, of Connellsville; I. G. Roby, of Uniontown; Alexander McCauch, of Scottdale; Chauncey B. Ross, of Greensburg; T. D. Lowther of Somerset; J. W. Donaldson, of Jeannette; David Young, of Brownsville; W. H. Hoard of Monongahela.

J. B. McDermott, chief Mine Inspector of Montana, said he had come 2,000 miles simply to see these experiments.

There were other features of the day equally as interesting as the lamp testing, such as testing safety and non-safety explosives; black dust of the mine; coal gas, and other elements in which danger exists in the mining of coal. All this made the finish of the annual convention of the Mine Inspectors' Institute of the United States, which began its sessions in Scranton, Pa., adjourned there Friday and went to Pittsburg to take in these tests before final adjournment.

The result of the closing day's session aroused the keenest enthusiasm. Resolutions were adopted indorsing the use of non-inflammable explosives in mines and also indorsing the work of the Government in the testing laboratory at Arsenal Park. The convention discussed during its sessions means of increasing the safety of mining operations and the adoption of rules for guidance of miners and mine officials along these lines. The convention was regarded as a most successful one.

FIRST COAL FROM 670-FOOT SHAFT

New Operation at St. Michael Started in 1907 Now Working to Satisfaction of Owners.

The Maryland Coal Company of Pennsylvania Saturday hoisted from its shaft at St. Michael the first coal since work on the new opening was started in April, 1907.

The new shaft, named Coleman, is 670 feet deep and taps the B, or Miller vein. The company believes it has one of the finest and most up-to-date tipples in that part of the State. Steam is used in hoisting the coal and electricity is the means of lighting the mine. The company has a spur to the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad about one mile in length. About 125 men are being employed now.

The first hoist was witnessed by President J. E. Knapp, and Directors George Hewlett and W. H. Van Kleeck. Mr. Hewlett is Vice President, Mr. Nedham Secretary and Treasurer, F. Earnest Bracket Superintendent, Frank Pardoe mine foreman, and W. F. Cline engineer.

Family of Shoplifters.

New York, June 19.—Frank Wiley, his wife, Mary Wiley, and his sister, all of Jersey City, were convicted here of shoplifting. One other member of the family, Wiley's six-year-old daughter, was not on trial, but her case will probably come up in the children's court.

STORAGE OF COAL UNDER THE WATER.

It Is Proposed as Remedy for Two Great Inconveniences.

SAVES NATURAL DIMINUITION

The Water Would Also Prevent Spontaneous Combustion, as Well as Serving For a Preservative—Exposure to the Air Deteriorating Agent.

The storage of coal under water has been proposed as a remedy for two great inconveniences of the common method of storage—danger of spontaneous combustion and deterioration of the quality of the fuel. Coal, when freshly mined, is very easily affected by chemical, mechanical, and physical agencies, says the Scientific American. The effect of exposure to the atmosphere is a gradual diminution of the coal in consequence of a loss of calorific power and substance, and a deterioration in the quantity of the gas and coke obtained from it.

The first action is a rapid absorption of oxygen which is partly combined chemically, with the formation of water and carbon dioxide and a disengagement of heat. This effect is particularly noticeable in fine coal, which exposes a large surface to the air. During the storage the gas-producer power of the coal also diminishes. If oxidation is increased artificially, it may be observed that the coke produced from the coal does no cohere, and that the gas consists largely of hydrogen and gives little light. The value of the by-product is also diminished. The gases evolved by piles of coal consists chiefly of methan, mixed with very variable quantities of carbon monoxids, higher hydro carbon and even nitrogen. The absorption of water is very variable, from 4 to 10 per cent. Grundmann's researches show that in regard to colorific powder, a medium coal containing 5 to 10 per cent. of ash and as much of hygroscopic water and producing 6,500 or 7,000 calories lost at least 4 per cent of its value in four weeks, 9 per cent in six months, and 12 per cent in one year. In certain climates the loss in a year amounts to 20 to 30 per cent.

Spontaneous combustion is always to be feared in large masses of coal. It has been proved that the temperature of English coal freshly stored rises in two or three days to from 70 to 85 degrees F., and thereafter continues between 85 and 100 degrees F. Water may accelerate this rise of temperature by bringing oxygen in solution. Special care should be taken not to deposit dry coal upon any large quantity of damp coal. Wet coal should be spread in layers eight inches thick and allowed to dry 24 hours before being covered with a new layer. Sulphur compounds do not play an important part in spontaneous ignition. Pyrites resists atmospheric influences well, with the exception of the variety called marcassite which tends to decompose in the presence of water. The practise of ventilating piles of coal by means of little shafts and canals, although recommended by insurance companies, is rather injurious than otherwise, as it facilitates the absorption of oxygen. If ventilation is attempted, it should be mechanical and very energetic in order to produce refrigeration which will counterbalance the oxidizing effect of the air.

COKE LEVELLER MAKES GOOD RECORD

New Machine Placed in Successful Operation at Continental No. 1 Ovens.

A new coke leveller, designed and built by the Covington Machine Company, on lines similar to its drawing and loading machines, was tested at Continental No. 1 plant of the H. C. Frick Coke Company last Friday morning and met with the approval of the management and a number of operators who went out to see the trial. The new machine weighs about ten tons and is operated on the larry tracks. It was found that it did the work of levelling in a very short time and it is believed the machine will level an oven in about one minute on an average while it takes a man at least 20 minutes to level each oven. The machine will level all sizes of coal. It is estimated that the use of the machine will reduce the cost of production seven cents per ton which is the cost of levelling by hand.

During Friday morning's test, but fifteen ovens were ready for levelling. The machine is now being used daily at this plant. One of the records made at the first test was the levelling of three ovens in four and one-half minutes and it is the general opinion that the machine can do better than this when running regularly. Its introduction will be in line with other labor saving appliances to reduce the cost and meet the shortage of labor with which operators of the Connellsville region have had to contend during periods of big production.

The Man From Brodney's

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright, 1908, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

A handsome young soldier of fortune, a princess of enchanting beauty, two eccentric adventurers who leave wills disposing of the island of Japat and its ruby mines, two heirs who must marry within a year to inherit the property despite the fact that they are already married, shrewd American lawyer, a scheming British solicitor, a pretty stenographer, a prince who is musical and profligate and a horde of fanatical Moslems who will inherit the riches of Japat provided the heirs do not marry each other—these are the leading characters in a romance which for genuine novelty, thrilling and unusual situations, live American humor and the pathos of a great but apparently hopeless love has rarely been equaled and never surpassed.

CHAPTER I.

THE LATE MR. SKAGGS.

THE death of Taswell Skaggs was stimulating, to say the least, inapplicable though the expression may seem. He attained the end of a hale old age by tumbling aimlessly into the mouth of a crater on the island of Japat, somewhere in the mysterious south seas. The world had quite thoroughly forgotten him during the twenty odd years immediately preceding his death. It was, however, noticeably worth while to remember him at this particular time. He left a last will and testament that bade fair to distress as well as startle a great many people on both sides of the Atlantic.

In Boston the law firm of Bowen & Hare was puzzling itself beyond reason in the effort to anticipate and circumvent the plans of the firm of Bosworth, Newnes & Grapewin, London, E. C., while on the other side of the Atlantic Messrs. Bosworth, Newnes & Grapewin were blindly struggling to do precisely the same thing in relation to Messrs. Bowen & Hare.

Without seeking to further involve myself I shall at once conduct the reader to the nearest of these law offices.

"Pretty badly tangled, I declare," said Mr. Hare, staring helplessly at his senior partner.

"Hopelessly," agreed Mr. Bowen, very much as if he had at first intended to groan.

Before them on the table lay the contents of a bulky envelope, a long and stupendous letter from their London correspondents and with it a copy of Taswell Skaggs' will. Mr. Bowen recently had been named as joint executor of the will, together with Sir John Allencrombie of London, W. C., one time neighbor of the late Mr. Skaggs. A long and exasperating cablegram had touched somewhat irresolutely upon the terms of the will, besides notifying him that one of the heirs resided in Boston. He was instructed to apprise this young man of his good fortune.

There was one very important, perhaps imposing, feature in connection with the old gentleman's will—he was decidedly sound of mind and body when it was uttered.

When such astute lawyers as Bowen & Hare give up to amazement, the usual forerunner of consternation, it is high time to regard the case as startling.

"Read it again, Bowen."

"The will?"

"No; the letter."

Whereupon Mr. Bowen again read aloud the letter from Bosworth, Newnes & Grapewin, this time slowly and speculatively.

"They seem as much upset by the situation as we," he observed reflectively.

"Extraordinary state of affairs, I must say."

"And I don't know what to do about it. I don't even know how to begin. They're both married."

"And not to each other."

"She's the wife of a Lord knows what of a lord, and he's married to an uncommonly fine girl, they say, notwithstanding the fact that she has larger social aspirations than he has means."

"And if that all important clause in the will is not carried out to the letter the whole fortune goes to the bowwows."

"Practically the same thing. He calls them 'natives;' that's all. It looks to me as though the bowwows will get the old man's millions. I don't see how anything short of Providence can alter the situation."

"Thank heaven, Bowen, he names you as executor, not me."

"I shall decline to serve. It's an impossible situation, Hare. In the first place, Skaggs was not an intimate friend of mine. I met him in Constantinople five years ago and afterward handled some business for him in New York. He had no right to impose upon me as if"—

"But why should you hesitate? You have only to wait for the year to roll by and then turn your troubles over to the natives. Young Browne can't marry Miss Ruthven inside of a year simply because there is no Miss Ruthven. She's Lady—Lady—what's the name?"

"Deppingham."

"And Browne already has one Mrs. Browne to his credit, don't you see. Well, that settles it, I'd say. It's hardly probable that Browne will murder or divorce his wife, nor is it likely that her ladyship would have the courage to dispose of her incumbrance in either way on such short notice."

"But it means millions to them, Hare."

"That's their unfortunate lookout. You are to act as an executor, not as a matrimonial agent."

"But, man, it's an outrage to give all of it to those wretched islanders. Bosworth says that rubies and sapphires grow there like mushrooms."

"Bosworth also says that the islanders are thrifty, intelligent and will fight for their rights. There are lawyers among them, he says, as well as jewel diggers and fishermen."

"Skaggs and Lady Deppingham's grandfather were the only white men who ever lived there long enough to find out what the island had stored up for civilization. That's why they bought it outright, but I'm hanged if I can see why he wants to give it back to the natives."

"Perhaps he owes it to them. He doubtless bought it for a song, and, contrary to all human belief, he may have resurrected a conscience. Anyhow, there remains a chance for the heirs to break the will."

"It can't be done, Hare; it can't be done. It's as clean an instrument as ever survived a man."

It is by this time safe for the reader to assume that Mr. Taswell Skaggs had been a rich man and therefore privileged to be eccentric. He came of a sound old country family in upper England, but seems to have married a bit above his station. His wife was serving as governess in the home of a certain earl when Taswell won her heart and dragged her from the exalted position of minding other people's children into the less conspicuous one of caring for her own.

Their only son was killed by a runaway horse when he was twenty, and their daughter became the wife of an American named Browne when she was scarcely out of her teens. It was then that Mr. Skaggs, practically childless, determined to make himself wifeless as well.

He magnanimously deeded the untailed farm to his wife, turned his securities into cash and then set forth upon a voyage of exploration. It is common history that upon one dark, still night in December he said goodby forever to the farm and its mistress, but it is doubtful if either of them heard him.

To be "jolly well even" with him Mrs. Skaggs did a most priggish thing. She died six months later, but before doing so she made a will in which she left the entire estate to her daughter, effectually depriving the absent husband of any chance to reclaim his own.

Taswell Skaggs was in Shanghai when he heard the news. It was on a Friday. His informant was that erstwhile friend Jack Wyckholme. Naturally Skaggs felt deeply aggrieved with the fate which permitted him to capitulate when unconditional surrender was so close at hand. His language for one brief quarter of an hour did more to upset the progress of Christian endeavor in the far east than all the idols in the Chinese empire.

"There's nawthin' in England for me, Jackie. My gal's a bloomin' foreigner by this time, and she'll sell the bleed'n' farm, of course. She's an American, God bless 'er 'eart. I dare say if I'd go to 'er and say I'd like my farm back again she'd want to fork hover, but 'er 'usband wouldn't be for that sort of hextravagance. 'E'd boot me off the blisland."

"The United States isn't an island, Tazzy," explained Mr. Wyckholme, gulping his brandy and soda.

Mr. Wyckholme was the second son of Sir Somebody-or-other and had married the vicar's daughter. This put him into such bad odor with his family that he hurried off to the dogs—and a goodly sized menagerie besides if the records of the inebriate's asylum are to be credited. His wife, after enduring him for sixteen years, secured a divorce. Accepting the world as his home, he ventured forth to visit every nook and cranny of it. In course of time he came upon his old time neighbor and boyhood friend, Taswell Skaggs, in the city of Shanghai. Neither of them had seen the British isles in two years or more.

"'Ow-do you know?" demanded Taswell.

"Haven't I been there, old chap? A year or more? It's a rotten big place where gentlemen aspire to sell gloves and handkerchiefs and needlework over the shop counters. You know, Tazzy, I could well afford to starve, and I wouldn't sell things, so I came away. But it's no island."

"Well, that's neither here nor there, Jackie. I 'aven't a 'ome, and you 'aven't a 'ome, and we're wanderers on the face of the earth. My wife played me a beastly trick, doin' like that. I say marriage is a bloomin' nuisance."

"Marriage, my boy, is the convalescence from a love affair. One wants to get out the worst way, but has to stay in till he's jolly well cured. For my part, I'm never going back to England."

"Nor I. It would be just like me, Jackie, to 'ave a relapse and never get out again."

The old friends took an inventory. Jack Wyckholme, gentleman's son and ne'er-do-well, possessed £9 and a fraction, an appetite and excellent spirits, while Taswell Skaggs exhibited a balance of £1,000 in a Shanghai bank, a fairly successful trade in Celestial necessities and an unbounded eagerness to change his luck.

"I have a proposition to make to you, Tazzy," said Mr. Wyckholme late in the night.

"I think I'll listen to it Jackie," replied Mr. Skaggs quite soberly.

As the outcome of this midnight proposition Taswell Skaggs and John Wyckholme arrived two months later at the tiny island of Japat, somewhere south of the Arabian sea, there to remain until their dying days and there to accumulate the wealth which gave the first named a chance to make an extraordinary will. For thirty years they lived on the island of Japat. Wyckholme preceded Skaggs to the grave by two winters, and he willed his share of everything to his partner of thirty years' standing. But there was a proviso in Wyckholme's bequest, just as there was in that of Skaggs. Each had made his will some fifteen years or more before death, and each had bequeathed his fortune to the survivor. At the death of the survivor the entire property was to go to the grandchild of each testator, with certain reservations to be mentioned later on, each having by investigation discovered that he possessed a single grandchild.

The island of Japat had been the home of a Mohammedan race, the outgrowth of Arabian adventurers who had lured far from home many years before Wyckholme happened upon the island by accident. It was a British possession, and there were two or three thousand inhabitants, all Mohammedans. Skaggs and Wyckholme purchased the land from the natives, protected and eased their rights with the government and proceeded to realize on what the natives had unwittingly prepared for them. In course of time the natives repented of the deal which gave the Englishmen the right to pick and sell the rubies and other precious stones that they had been trading away for such trifles as silks, gewgaws and women. A revolution was imminent, whereupon the owners organized the entire population into a great stock company, retaining four fifths of the property themselves. This seemed to be a satisfactory arrangement, despite the fact that some of the more warlike leaders were difficult to appease. It is only necessary to add that the beautiful island of Japat, standing like an emerald in the sapphire waters of the orient, brought millions in money to the two men who had been unlucky in love.

"There remains a chance for the heirs to break the will."

And now, after more than thirty years of voluntary exile, both of them were dead, and both of them were buried in the heart of an island of rubies, their deed and their deeds remaining to posterity—with reservations.

CHAPTER II

AN EXTRAORDINARY DOCUMENT.

IT appears that the Messrs. Skaggs and Wyckholme as their dual career drew to a close set about to learn what had become of their daughters. Investigation proved that Wyckholme's daughter had married a London artist, named Ruthven. The Ruthvens in turn had one child, a daughter. Wyckholme's wife and his daughter died when this grandchild was eight or ten years old. By last report the grandchild was living with her father in London. She was a pretty young woman, with scores of admirers on her hands and a very level head on her shoulders.

Wyckholme held to his agreement with Skaggs by bequeathing his share of the property to him, but it was definitely set forth that at the death of his partner it was to go to Agnes Ruthven, the grandchild—with reservations.

Skaggs found that his daughter, who married Browne, the American, likewise had died, but that she had left behind a son and heir. This son, Robert Browne, was in school when the joint will was designed, and he was to have Skaggs' fortune at the death of Wyckholme in case that worthy survived.

In order to keep the business and the property intact and under the perpetual control of one partnership the granddaughters of Wyckholme was to marry the grandson of Skaggs within the year after the death of the surviving partner. The penalty to be imposed upon them if the conditions were not complied with, neither to be excusable for the defection of the other, lay in the provision that the whole industry and its accumulated fortune, including the land (and they owned practically the entire island), were to go to the islanders. Wyckholme named Sir John Allencrombie as one executor, and Skaggs selected Alfred Bowen of Boston as the other.

As Wyckholme was the first to die, Skaggs became sole owner of the island and its treasures, and it was he who made the final will in accordance with the original plans.

The island of Japat, with its jewels and its ancient chateau, of modern construction, represented several million pounds sterling. Wyckholme's dream of erecting an exact replica of a famous old chateau found response in the equally whimsical Skaggs, who constantly bemoaned the fact that it was impossible to spend money. For five years after its completion the two old men, with an army of Arabian retainers and Nubian slaves, lived like oriental potentates in the huge structure on the highlands overlooking the sea.

Skaggs seldom went from one part of his home to another without a guide. It was so vast and so labyrinthine that he feared he might become lost forever. The dungeon below the chateau and the moat with its bridges were the especial delight of these lonely, romantic old chaps. One of the builders of this rare pile was now sleeping peacefully in the sarcophagus beneath the chapel; the other was lying dead and undiscovered in the very heart of his possessions.

The magnificent plans of the partners would have been a glorious tribute to romance had it not been for one fatal obstacle. The trouble was that young Miss Ruthven and young Mr. Browne did not know that their grandfathers lived much less that they owned an island in the south seas. Therefore it is quite natural that they could not have known they were expected to marry each other.

Miss Ruthven, from motives peculiar to the head and not to the heart, set about to earn a title for herself. Three months before the death of Mr. Skaggs she was married to Lord Deppingham, who possessed a title and a country place that rightfully belonged to his creditors. Mr. Browne, just out of college, hung out his shingle as a physician and surgeon and forthwith, with all the confidence his profession is supposed to inspire, proceeded to marry the daughter of a brokerage banker in Boston and at once found himself struggling with the difficulties of Back Bay society.

A clause in the will, letter of instruction attached, demanded that the two grandchildren should take up their residence in the chateau within six months after the death of the testator, there to remain through the compulsory days of courtship, up to and including the wedding day. Four months had already passed. It was also stipulated that the executors should receive £10,000 each at the expiration of their year of servitude, provided it was shown in court that they had carried out the wishes of the testator or in failing had made the most diligent effort within human power.

"It is very explicit," murmured Mr. Hare for the third time. "I suppose the first step is to notify young Mr. Browne of his misfortune. His lordship has the task of breaking the news to Lady Deppingham."

"You are assuming that I intend to act under this ridiculous will."

"Certainly. It means about $50,000 to you at the end of the year, with nothing to do but to notify two persons of the terms in the will. If they're not divorced and married again at the end of the year you and Sir John simply turn everything over to the Malays, or whatever they are. I think it's easy sledding for you."

Young Mr. Browne hastened down town in response to a message from the American executor and was told of the will which had been filed in England, the home land of the testator. To say that this debonair, good looking young gentleman was flabbergasted would be putting it more than mildly.

"What shall I do—what can I do, Mr. Bowen?" he gasped, bewildered.

"Consult an attorney," advised Mr. Bowen promptly.

"I'll do it!" shouted Bobby Browne, one time halfback on his college eleven. "Break the will for me, Mr. Bowen, and I'll give"—

"I can't break it, Bobby. I'm its executor."

"Good Lord! Well, then who is the best will breaker you know, please? Something has to be done right away."

"I'm afraid you don't grasp the situation. Now, if you were not married it would"—

"I wouldn't give up my wife for all the islands in the universe. That's settled. You don't know how happy we are. She's the"—

"Yes, yes, I know," interrupted the wily Mr. Bowen. "Don't tell me about it. Go and see Judge Garrett, over in the K. building. They say he expects to come back from the grave to break his own will."

Ten minutes later an excited young man rushed into an office in the K. building.

"You will have to fight it jointly," said Judge Garrett after extracting the wheat from the chaff of Browne's remarks. "You can't take hers away from her and she can't get yours. We must combine against the natives. Come back tomorrow at 2."

"It's as sound as the rock of Gibraltar"

Promptly at 2 Browne appeared, eager eyed and nervous. He had left behind him at home a miserable young woman with red eyes and choking breath who bemoaned the cruel conviction that she stood between him and fortune.

"But, hang it all dearest, I wouldn't marry that girl if I had the chance. I'd marry you all over again today if I could," he had cried out to her, but she wondered all afternoon if he really meant it. It never entered her head to wonder if Lady Deppingham was old or young, pretty or ugly, bright or dull.

Judge Garrett had a copy of the will in his hand. He looked dubious, even dismayed.

"It's as sound as the rock of Gibraltar," he announced dolefully.

"You don't mean it!" gasped poor Bobby, mopping his fine Harvard brow, his six feet of manhood shrinking perceptibly as he looked about for a chair in which to collapse. "C-can't it be smashed?"

"It might be an easy matter to prove either of these old gentlemen to have been insane, but the two of them together make it out of the question."

"Darned unreasonable!"

"What do you mean, sir?" indignantly.

"I mean—oh, you know what I mean—the conditions and all that. Why, the old chumps must have been trying to prove their grandchildren insane when they made that will. Nobody but imbeciles would marry people they'd never seen!"—

"But the will provides for a six months' courtship, Mr. Browne. I'm sorry to say. You might learn to love a person in less time and still retain your mental balance you know, especially if she were pretty and an heiress to half your own fortune. I dare say that is what they were thinking about."

"Thinking? They weren't thinking of anything at all. They weren't capable. Why didn't they consider the possibility that things might turn out just as they have?"

"Possibly they did consider it, my boy. It looks to me as if they did not care a rap whether it went to their blood relatives or to the islanders. I fancy of the two they loved the islanders more. At any rate, they left a beautiful opening for the very complications which now conspire to give the natives their own, after all. It's necessary for both of you to be on the ground according to schedule. You must go to the island, wife or no wife, and there's not much time to be lost. Lady Deppingham won't let the grass grow under her feet if I know anything about the needs of English nobility, and I'll bet my hat she's packing her trunks now for a long stay in Japat. You have farther to go than she but you must get over there inside of sixty days. You can't tell what may happen in the next six months."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, it's possible that you may become a widower and she a wid"—

"Good heaven, Judge Garrett! Impossible!" gasped Bobby Browne, clutching the arms of his chair.

"Nothing is impossible, my boy."

"Well, if that's what you're counting on you can count me out. I won't speculate on my wife's death."

"But, man, suppose that it did happen!" roared the judge irascibly. "You should be prepared for the best—I mean the worst. Don't look like a sick dog. You go to the island at once. Take your wife along if you like. You'll find her ladyship there, and she'll need a woman to tell her troubles to. I don't think we'll have any trouble getting the British heirs to join in the suit to overthrow the will. The only point is this—the islanders must not have the advantage that your absence from Japat will give to them. Now, I'll"—

"But I don't like the suggestion that my wife will be obliged to die in order"—

"Please leave all the details to me, Mr. Browne. It may not be necessary for her to die. There are other alternatives in law. Give the lawyers a chance. All you have to do is to plant yourself on that island and stay there until we tell you to get off."

In a game which was marked by steady playing on both sides, yet devoid of sensational features, Uniontown defeated Connellsville in the latter town yesterday, 2 to 1. The Cokers made a desperate, ninth-inning rally, to tie the score but fell short when Tiffany was nailed at the plate after a breakneck to tally on Gilligan's single to right field

Jack Cotter pitched better ball than Wilson and would have won had his support been of the best. Uniontown got its hits, for the most part, on scratches, but they came at a bad time for the Cokers. The game in detail:

First Inning.

Gilligan walked but was forced on Hagan's grounder, Wilson to McCloskey Hagan, in turn was forced when Ike Francis hit to Carnes and was tossed out to McCloskey. Myers flew to Cariss. No runs.

Calhoun fanned but Fralley was hit, Chip Francis flew to Rudolph and Tiffany forced Fralley at second on an infield grounder. No runs.

Phillips poked one over Hagan's head for a single, Cariss sacrificed, Tiffany to Gilligan. Carnes hit through Gilligan for a base, the ball bounding badly as it reached the Coker infielder. McCloskey singled, scoring Phillips Snodgrass hit to Gilligan, who juggled, permitting Carnes to score from third, but Snodgrass was retired at first. Wilson was out, Cotter to Tiffany. Two runs.

Third Inning.

Cotter went out, Wilson to Carnes Gilligan was hit and Hagan singled Ike Francis went out, Wilson to Carnes and Myers flew to Phillips No runs.

Phillips grounded out to Tiffany, Cariss popped a high one Gilligan gathered in and Carnes went out, Gilligan to Tiffany No runs.

Fifth Inning.

Tiffany singled and Cotter attempted a sacrifice. Wilson threw to Miller but Tiffany beat the toss to second. Gilligan tried to lay one down but Cotter was caught at second, Tiffany taking third and Gilly first. Hagan singled and Tiffany scored Ike Francis went out, Wilson to Carnes but Myers whom Wilson tried to pass got hit. Calhoun hit a mean one to McCloskey and Myers was forced at second, Miller taking the throw One run

McCloskey fanned and Snodgrass went out, Cotter to Tiffany Wilson singled past Gilligan but was forced on Miller's hit to Hagan, Gilligan taking the throw at second. No runs.

Sixth Inning.

Fralley hit to left and reached second but was touched out by McCloskey when he slid over the bag and tried to raise himself back on the canvas Chip Francis was out, Wilson to Carnes while Tiffany died by the Hilley-Carnes route No runs.

Hilley and Rudolph died at first, Ike Francis and Gilligan making the assists Phillips fanned. No runs.

Seventh Inning.

Cotter was out, McCloskey to Carnes. Gilligan and Hagan went out at first, Miller making both assists No runs.

Cariss went down, Hagan to Tiffany, Carnes flew to Calhoun and McCloskey popped to Gilligan. No runs.

Eighth Inning

Ike Francis and Myers were both thrown out at first by McCloskey Calhoun hit to Hilley and was tossed out. No runs.

Hit best but lost.
Uniontown has our goat.
Get sweet revenge this afternoon.
Johnny Yoedt will twirl against the Champs
Jack Cotter deserved to win his game yestreday.
Ike Francis didn't hit the ball to the outfield once.
Where were some of those safe hits Dutch Myers always gets?
The "heavy" hitters were very much to the bad. Take a brace today.
There is a report that two of our stars were out late the night before
Manager Sweeney would have won the game had Wilson not passed him in the ninth
Gordon Tiffany did his best He was never a 10-second man, but he ran like it.
Barney Gilligan had stage fright but only one play was costly. That was the jungle
Kid Hagan had his eyes on the ball all the time His hits were all to the merry, merry.
Gilligan's long single was timely A fast man might have beaten the throw to the home plate
Nothing wrong with Ike Francis whip yesterday. He heaved 'em over in splendid style
Seven men left on the sacks. Looks like the same old, old story once more Get on and stay
Jack Cotter gets a sacrifice through the peculiar scoring they do in Uniontown, Both men were safe
There were no stolen bases. Both sides were afraid to test the whips of the star backstops.
Chip Francis was there with his usual fly balls. He sent them all up in the air but a single one
Dave Calhoun wasn't very lucky with the stick McCloskey killed what looked like a sure bingle in the fifth
Guess that boy Tiffany is getting there with his reputation as a pinch hitter. Shove him up a peg.
Doc Wilson was wild but tame enough to trim the Cokers Sweeney's Savages are truly terrible at times
It would be worth money to have a hitter or two who could advance men on the sacks Some of our fellows fail habitually.
"Honest" Abe Kruger may work today He cannot do any better than Wilson And that spells V-I-C-T-O-R-Y
The boys pelted the pellet, as the list of assists will show, but they had a hard time landing them safe
Believe Wilson's ball was doped The hits sounded like it Only a few drives got past the Uniontown infield
Gilligan had to stop to put on his shoes before batting in the ninth. He thought it was all over and it was—almost
Only two Cokers struck out They were Calhoun Wilson's drop fooled Dave a couple of times That one curve worked nice at times
McCloskey was worried He sent Livengood out to warm up in the ninth but Wilson pulled his game out of the fire, thanks to Joe Phillips.
Uniontown has the gawkiest looking hitters in the league. Rudolph, Phillips and Cariss look like Rubes when they wield the willow.
Jimmy Miller was some sore when he failed to hit safely. He fought them on the bench for kidding him There were others in the same boat, Jimmy
Just six Uniontown men reached first base Two of them scored. The Cokers got 17 men to first, but several died on the sacks Others were deserted
The Cokers can get more men on the sacks and fewer off than any team in the league Chart furnished for this squib on demand.
Weddige had it in for Yoedt and Ike Francis and chased both of them to the bench for so-called improper coaching Weddige keeps the game going—sometimes
About 100 Connellsville fans witnessed the game The paid admissions were in the neighborhood of 300. Lots of sports in Uniontown, my, yes
One of the new attorneys from Uniontown yelped about what the team would do down here today He will not be here today It costs 65 cents
The West Penn is furnishing great service for the Connellsville fans A special car was run back to Connellsville immediately after the game Thanks
'Sligo' Fletcher doesn't like a Uniontown sporting writer. Bet the scribe is shedding briny tears of grief over such a sad state of affairs
The Uniontown fans didn't know just who to root for They like to be on the band wagon all the time and were taking no chances
Fans thought Gilligan should have an error on his juggle Couldn't do it; he got his man on first The miscue cost the winning run

WORK THAT TELLS.

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Connellsville.

Cures that last are cures that tell To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test and plenty of proof exists right here in Connellsville People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Connellsville sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Mrs John Kerns, 916 Etna street, Connellsville, Pa., says. "During the summer of 1897, Mr Kerns used Doan's Kidney Pills and received the greatest relief from kidney trouble At that time he suffered from pains through his loins, which often became so severe that he could hardly move If he caught cold or overworked the trouble was aggravated The kidney secretions also gave him some annoyance and he was in a bad way when he procured Doan's Kidney Pills They gave him immediate relief from the pains and aches and strengthened his kidneys."

(From statement given May 13th 1904.)

Confirmed Proof

On October 7th, 1907, Mrs Kerns confirmed her statement in the following words "Mr Kerns has had occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills on one or two occasions since, when he has noticed a slight recurrence of backache and they have never failed to give him prompt and effectual relief He values them highly."
